Espying Heaven:

The Stained Glass of Charles Eamer Kempe (1837 – 1907)

On behalf of the Lincolnshire Churches Trust, an illustrated lecture by Adrian Barlow on the work of the leading 19th century stained glass designer. Kempe's influence on Victorian and 20th century church art and decoration was immense, as evidenced by his patrons who included Royalty, senior clergy, the aristocracy and friends.

At St. Wulfram's Church, Grantham on Friday 12th April 2019 at 2.30 pm.

Tickets are £10 per head, to include light refreshments in the church after the lecture. Please book tickets from Mona Dickinson 01529 307433, The Manor Evedon, Sleaford NG34 9PA

Cheques payable to Lincolnshire Churches Trust

Adrian Barlow is an experienced writer and lecturer on literature, architecture and stained glass. A former Deputy Director of Continuing Education at Madingley Hall Cambridge and a Senior Member of Wolfson College, his knowledge of and enthusiasm for Kempe goes back over thirty years. His two books on the artist/designer, Kempe and Espying Heaven have met with acclaim.

There are stained glass windows by Kempe & Co in St Wulframs.

Adrian Barlow will have copies of his recently published book, Espying Heaven with him and they will be available to purchase, signed after the lecture, for those who wish.
